Province of Communist China about 6.7 nautical miles (nm) south of Nan-k'ou.

A hard-surface road of two or more lanes connects Yang-fang with Nan-k'ou.

An installation at Yang-fang was covered by photography; it consists of about 116 military-type buildings. However, the scale and quality do not permit detailed interpretation.

The mission is probably military in nature; the buildings possibly house an army unit of regimental to divisional size.

The buildings at Yang-fang have been compared with those of other installations in the area. Several installations between Yang-fang and Nan-k'ou contain buildings which are similar in arrangement and configuration to those at Yang-fang (Figure 2). One of these installations is located at T'ing-tzu-chuang (40-09N 116-08E). The installations between Yang-fang and Nan-k'ou are visible on large-scale photography which does not cover Yang-fang.

25X1D [ ] A troop-training area is located about midway between Yang-fang and T'ing-tzu-chuang.
